Over 190 nations adopt landmark biodiversity pact to restore natural ecosystems

190 nations have adopted a landmark biodiversity pact to restore natural ecosystems, marking a historic moment in global environmental governance. The pact, known as the Kunming-Montreal Global Biodiversity Framework, sets a clear path for halting and reversing biodiversity loss by 2050. It includes 23 targets and 10 global goals, such as protecting 30% of the planet's land and 30% of its oceans. The agreement was reached after two weeks of negotiations in Montreal, Canada, and is expected to be signed by all 190 parties in the coming months.
